WELCOME

Dear New CPT Member,

By virtue of your assignment, you are now part of San Diego County’s Child Protection Team system and join over one hundred colleagues around the county in law enforcement, child welfare services, medicine, prosecution, mental health, County Counsel and victim advocacy that are collectively charged with protecting San Diego’s Children from abuse, violence and serious child neglect. The member agencies have Worked together, in various forms, for over 30 years making San Diego’s child protection Team the longest standing community child protection team in the world.

Addendums to this orientation packet are the current County Child Victim Witness Protocol, Revised and signed by the agency heads of the member agencies in 2012, and its accompanying Field Checklists. Both documents guide the collaborative and multidisciplinary approach to child abuse and have imperative information about specific practices for all agencies involved, with the overall goal of reducing any further trauma to children. Both the Child Victim Witness Protocol and the Field Checklists can be accessed through your agency website and/or on the Chadwick Center website at www.chadwickcenter.org.

We appreciate your willingness to assume this difficult and demanding assignment. The Children of our community are counting on you and your fellow team members to work Effectively together to make our community safer.

Thank you,

Child Protection Team Management Group

SEXUAL ABUSE EXAM CONSIDERATIONS

I. Indications for an exam
   • An injury is suspected
   • It is likely forensic evidence will be recovered
   • If there is a history of recent sexual contact

II. Timing of forensic examinations for sexual assault victims
   • Generally, children should be seen for a forensic exam if they present within 72 hours of the sexual abuse/assault. However, the need for an acute examination should be based on the child’s history, symptoms, and post-assault behavior and not solely on time from assault.
   • Evidence may be collected after the traditional 72-hour window
   • Medical providers (e.g., Rady Children’s and Palomar Hospitals) should be consulted to determine urgency and timing of the examination
   • Acute or urgent examinations:
     • It is imperative that children not wash, bathe, or change clothes once the decision to perform the examination has been made in order to avoid destroying evidence.
     • If a child needs to urinate, it is important to save the urine.
Eating and drinking should be reasonably avoided until after the collection of specimens from the mouth.

- When a child presents weeks or more after an assault, it is likely that injuries will be healed and there will be no trace evidence. One may still find healed hymen tears, STDs, and pregnancy in a small number of children. If a child presents within two weeks of an assault, injuries may sometimes be seen that have not yet completely healed.
- In adolescent victims, sperm may sometimes be found up to two weeks in cervical mucus. In order to collect any residual evidence that may still remain, a forensic examination should be conducted.

III. Forms and Protocols

State of California mandatory Form 930 (Acute) and 925 (Nonacute) are filled out by the examiner and a copy is given to law enforcement at the conclusion of the exam. A copy is also retained by the hospital. The evidence packet is given to the accompanying officer to impound, or retained by the hospital to be given to the crime lab later.

PHYSICAL ABUSE EXAM CONSIDERATIONS

In addition to physical evaluations being conducted at Chadwick Center and Palomar, physical evaluations are also conducted at:

- Rady Children’s Hospital Emergency Department – open 24 hours
- Polinsky Center – examinations provided only for children who are admitted to Polinsky
- Naval Medical Center – for Military Dependents

I. Indications for an examination

- A child is injured and little or no history is available to explain the injury.
- The injury is not consistent with the history.
- Multiple injuries and/or head trauma is suspected or present.

II. Evaluation by a medical expert is necessary to:

- Document inflicted trauma
- Offer an opinion as to whether the described mechanism of injury is consistent with the findings
- Confirm long-term/chronic abuse or neglect if future legal proceedings are anticipated.

III. Timing of forensic examinations for physical abuse victims

- If the seriousness of the injuries necessitates immediate medical care call 911 or transport the child to the nearest emergency department.
- If there is no immediate medical danger to the child and the nature of the abuse requires a medical evaluation, arrangements should be made to take the child to a facility with qualified medical providers.

IV. Additional Resources

- Telephone Consultation - The on-call child abuse physician is available to consult by phone with Child Welfare Services or Law Enforcement. The on-call physician may be paged by Rady Children’s Hospital at 858-576-1700, ext. 0.
- Paper Consultations - For appropriate cases, paper consultations (review of medical records, photos, X-rays) are provided by Chadwick Center. Call to discuss/request –

You will pass by Juvenile Hall and keep going. The street will automatically turn to the right and turn into Birmingham Way. After the street makes a 90 degree left (becoming Children’s Way) there is a Visitors parking structure on the right. The Medical Office building is a detached building to the right of the Emergency Department.

Parking: Park in South parking structure off of Birmingham Way, across from the Rose Pavilion, the main hospital building. Parking is free to employees of County agencies and police departments (show your business card or credentials upon exiting) and other attendees can pick up parking validations at the meeting.

Who attends: The meeting typically includes core members of the MDT, to include Child Welfare Services (CWS), law enforcement investigators and supervisors, doctors, hospital social workers, forensic interviewers, mental health professionals, County Counsel, and DA’s office. Other non-core MDT members that may also attend the meeting are representatives from Family Court, Public Health Nursing, San Diego Unified Schools, the San Diego Regional Center, Voices for Children, Military, and other professionals tasked with child abuse issues. The meeting is also open to physicians and other professionals in training.

History: The meeting has been occurring since 1976. While Child Protection Team case review meetings now occur in most communities in some form, the San Diego Team has been meeting longer than any community Child Protection Team in the world. There are now scores of teams around the country and globe modeled after the San Diego CPT Meeting including the entire child protection system of the Philippines.

Criteria for putting a case on the agenda: Any team member can put a case on the meeting agenda. There are some cases that have been determined by the CPT as mandatory for case review. These typically involve cases that include serious injuries and or complex medical findings and/or require the coordination of multiple team agencies to ensure the child’s protection and/or physical or emotional recovery.

Mandatory case review:
1. Severe physical abuse
2. Death due to non-accidental trauma
3. Multiple victims/multiple perpetrators
4. Young infants, toddlers, preschoolers who are injured and
   a. Differing opinions on mechanism of injury
   b. Severe medical neglect that is life threatening
5. Cases with numerous risk factors such as
   i. Munchausen by Proxy
   ii. Minors under 12 months of age with NAT injuries

There are other types of cases that are optional for review and include:
1. Physical abuse with sexual abuse findings
2. Severe or complicated sexual abuse
3. Daycare, preschool, foster care cases
4. Juvenile perpetrators
5. Physical or sexual abuse injuries with little or no history or in which photos of the injuries will provide clarification of the injury
6. Ingestions
7. Failure to thrive
8. Burns
9. Prostituted and/or trafficked minors

How to put a case on the agenda: Email CPTagenda@rchsd.org by Monday at noon for that week’s meeting. Information that must be included in the email is:
- Your name/Agency (Presenter)
- Child’s name/age/DOB
- Suspects name/age/relationship
- Other agency members (names) involved
- Type of abuse

The completed agenda will be emailed to all CPT team members by end of day on Monday. Cases can be added last minute, if emergent, by calling (858) 966-5980.

Flow of case presentation: Case presentation begins with the member who put the case on the agenda. That team member will give a synopsis of the allegation, family dynamics and players, their role, and facts they have obtained to date. Presenters should not share info obtained by other agencies/members if that person/agency is present and can share that info first hand. All members of the team involved in the case will have the opportunity to clarify the facts, ask questions, express concerns, and/or make suggestions.

Presentation Guidelines: Be concise, avoid side conversations, do not personalize differences of opinions with another discipline, and be open to hearing the perspectives of other disciplines. If you have concerns as a member of the meeting about another agencies behavior and/or performance as related to the case, this should not be dealt with in this forum, but rather, you should contact that person or that person’s supervisor outside of the meeting to discuss your concerns.

MILITARY CHILD ABUSE PROGRAMS

Navy Family Advocacy Program (FAP)

Background: The Navy’s Family Advocacy Program (FAP) was established in 1976 in response to increased awareness of child abuse, concern for Navy families, and how family dysfunction detracts from Navy personnel readiness. In 1979 the program was expanded to include interventions for spousal violence. The implementation of the FAP involves Navy-wide efforts to prevent child and spousal violence through education of sailors and family members regarding the scope of the family violence issue, information about available resources, and outreach efforts such as the New Parent Support Program that provides in-home support and education to expectant mothers and to those with small children deemed at risk of child abuse. Senior Navy leaders are trained to screen for emerging family problems in order to refer their personnel to prevention and intervention services.

Program goals:
- Prevention
- Victim safety
- Offender accountability
- Rehabilitation and treatment
- Military community accountability

Referral to FAP: Any knowledge or awareness of a family being impacted by possible violence and/or abuse triggers a mandatory referral to the local FAP by Navy personnel and sets in motion a coordinated community response involving medical, social, legal and command involvement (employer intervention). Referrals to the FAP are also accepted from civilian agencies and individuals coming in contact with these Navy families, i.e., San Diego County Child Welfare Services, law enforcement, family members, medical facilities, and medical professionals.

Services provided: Case management support by a licensed mental health provider, victim advocacy for adults if spousal violence is occurring, medical treatment of injuries via Navy medical facilities and/or insurance covered facilities, and treatment services (see below). Further, it is a requirement for FAP personnel to have ongoing communication with a sailor’s command who will institute measures to monitor offenders, mandate offender cooperation with FAP, and separate victims and offenders as required. Commands may also hold military offenders accountable through legal means regardless of whether the civilian community’s judicial/law enforcement agencies are involved.

Treatment services: Specialized interventions for child abuse offenders (i.e., physical/emotional abuse and neglect), spouse abuse offenders, and services for child and adult victims are provided by FAP. FAP treatment providers and case managers work collaboratively with civilian health professionals and agencies to ensure the safety and well being of Navy families.

Navy Incident Determination Committee: Every FAP case is reviewed by an Incident Determination Committee comprised of the Installations’ Executive Officer, Command Master Chief, Staff Judge Advocate (JAG), Security Officer and the Family Advocacy Representative (FAR) who will review the case facts and determine whether the allegations meet the Criteria for abuse/neglect. A separate committee, the Clinical Case Staff Meeting (CCSM) makes recommendations on how to best serve each family. Case information is entered into a Navy-wide data base that facilitates continuity of care between locations as Navy families are required to relocate with some regularity to accommodate the missions/assignments of the active duty member.

Marine Corps San Diego Family Advocacy Services

Background: The biggest program difference between Marine Corps and Navy FAP is that the Marine Corps do not provide direct service to children and adolescents. Rather, referral and services are coordinated with community agencies. Civilian agencies, including CWS and/or law enforcement conduct the initial assessment with child Abuse and neglect cases, while the Marine Corps coordinates resource information for further assessment and/or treatment of the children and provides follow up case management services for the family and counseling services for the parents.

Services provided: initial Screening and Assessment: During an initial request for services, counselors screen for appropriateness per branch of the military and installation to which the Marine is attached. All information gathered during the initial screening and assessment regarding allegations of child physical or sexual abuse is reported to CPS/CWS. Military Protective Orders are often issued as needed by the command to maintain safety between the Marine and the other family members. This order is not enforceable by civilian law enforcement. On availability, the Family Advocacy can request the service member stay in a barracks on base until initial safety concerns are resolved.

Follow-Up Clinical Services: Coordination of treatment, intervention and case management services are provided for the family. Family Advocacy counselors track treatment progress and provide ongoing assessment while the Marine and family member is in treatment if consent to release information to the treatment provider is signed. Local installation and area wide military and civilian services are utilized to meet treatment requirements. The New Parent Support Program for the Marine Corps provides in home parent education and support services for children birth to six years old. CPS/CWS can receive assistance locating a Marine Family whose active duty Marine is stationed at one of the following bases and when coordinating their recommendations for both civilian and military services.
